Sudan - Situation Report

Country Sudan Year 2019 Month February

Key messages

• According to FEWSNET, prices for staple foods increased atypically due to the ongoing poor macroeconomic context, which have deteriorated following months of protests. Delayed harvest in semi-mechanized sorghum-producing areas, as well as currency depreciation and high cost of production and transportation has also negatively impacted prices.

• Availability of staple foods in the market place have remained stable over the past month due to increased cereal availability following the November to February harvest. Nonetheless, the overall purchasing power will remain below average and a higher number of households than is typically the case will face Crisis (IPC Phase 3) or worse outcomes of food insecurity.

• At least 3,120 internally displaced persons from Jebel Marra arrived into Otash centre 13 in South Darfur and 840 refugees from South Sudan were received in Alradoum refugee camp in East Darfur and are in dire need of humanitarian assistance. As at January 2019, Sudan hosted 848,091 South Sudanese refugees according to the UN Refugee Agency.

Gaps and needs

• World Vision has not been able to meet its funding needs that have been prioritised in East Darfur. Also, most of the projects have been short cycle often ending before the needs of the affected population are fully met. World Vision calls for more long-term funding in order to sustain the current activities without which children and their families will not access basic services. An estimated 166,357 people have returned to Alsaya, Sherria and Yassin localities, while there are at least 101,254 verified South Sudanese refugees in East Darfur.

• In February, 3,120 internally displaced persons arrived into South Darfur's Otash IDP camp from East Jebel Marra. Continued arrivals into camps only adds the pressure to the constrained resources available. Funding to meet basic needs for their survival is critical. However, World Vision acknowledges, that in the long run, providing livelihoods opportunities –particularly for those who have been in the camps longer is more sustanable.
