

Nagorno-Karabakh conflict-Sitrep

December 1, 2020

Situation overview

Armed conflict that erupted on the 27 of September in Nagorno-Karabakh - a disputed territory between Armenia and Azerbaijan, has halted with a ceasefire agreement signed by Armenia, Azerbaijan and Russia on the 10th of November. The security situation in Nagorno-Karabakh is reported to be relatively calm following the implementation of the ceasefire and the deployment of Russian Federation Peacekeepers in Nagorno-Karabakh.

Since 14th of November, the return of more than 23,514 Nagorno-Karabakh residents (out of 90,000) from the territory of Armenia to Stepanakert is reported. Those spontaneously arrived families that have to stay voluntarily in Armenia for range of reasons, often lack necessary food, hygiene items, adequate warm clothing and necessities for cold weather.

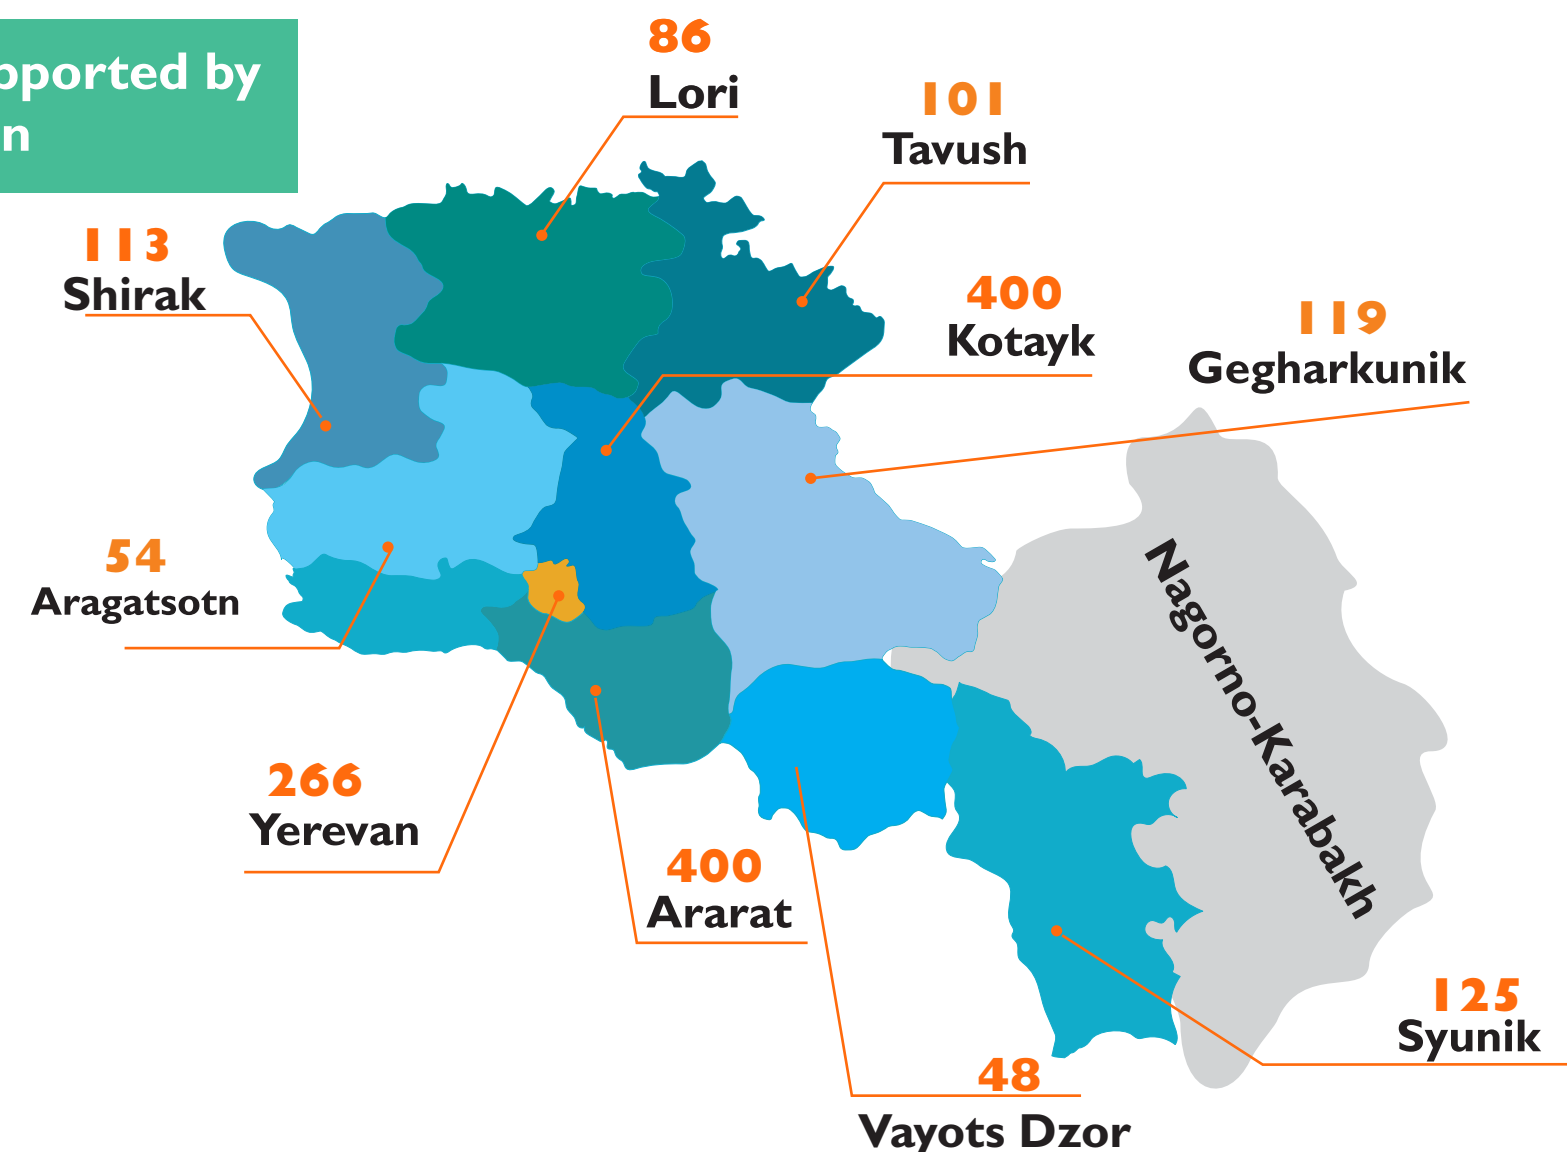

Due to the provisions in cease-fire agreement, many of the arrivals can no longer return to their homes in Nagorno-Karabakh.

UN Rapid Needs Assessment in certain communities of Armenia has identified unaccompanied/separated children among new arrivals. Moreover, according to the child protection specialists, many children arriving from Nagorno-Karabakh have no birth certificates.

World Vision aims to support 9,000 affected families, that includes

- Spontaneous arrivals from Nagorno-Karabakh into Armenia
- Hosting families in Armenia
- Most vulnerable families in Armenia affected by the conflict
