

CAPACITY STATEMENT

Child Protection and Education

We believe a world without violence against children is possible. We work with and among communities to address the root causes of violence against children. We also want to see all children in Sudan have the opportunity to receive quality education.

What is the problem?

According to UNICEF, about 64% of children in Sudan below fourteen years of age have experienced various forms of violence.

According to the UN, approximately 87% of Sudanese women have undergone some form of female genital mutilation (FGM) with girls usually cut between the ages of five and 14.

Education infrastructure, destroyed during the protracted conflict, has not been replaced fast enough to cope with population growth and the influx of newly displaced families.

How is World Vision addressing the issues?

We work with communities and key duty bearers to prevent abuse, exploitation and other forms of violence against children and ensure these incidents are reported and addressed effectively when they occur.

We also advocate, together with other child-focused organisations, to strengthen and reactivate child protection laws and policies.

We are rehabilitating existing learning spaces, constructing temporary learning spaces, providing families and children access to necessary school supplies and providing training and support to teachers.
