World Vision’s global campaign, ‘It takes a world to end violence against children’, aims to catalyse a global movement of people committed to keeping children safe from harm.

How are children affected by violence in Timor-Leste?

72% of women and 77% of men report experiencing abuse as children.

49% of women and 36% of men report witnessing their mother being abused when they were children.

Campaign outcomes

Outcome 1:
Increased knowledge and understanding amongst parents and caregivers of their obligation to protect children from physical and sexual violence in the home.

Outcome 2:
National/local governments and regional bodies are supported to improve implementation of laws and policies to prevent violence against children in the home.

Outcome 3:
Child protection and the campaign are well resourced and objectives are integrated into sectoral projects and World Vision departments.
