

Key messages

- The number of people estimated to be in need of humanitarian assistance has increased to 5.5 million as compared to 4.8 million in 2017.
- Influx of refugees from South Sudan and the Central African Republic likely to rise as they seek protection and humanitarian assistance, further straining the resources available and making other groups like host communities, IDPs and returnees also vulnerable.
- New areas have become accessible in Sudan's Jebel Marra, South Kordofan and parts of Blue Nile state that enabled needs assessments to be conducted revealing critical needs and interventions gaps.
- Food insecurity increasing mainly driven by increases in prices. Without an increase in income, a larger proportion of IDPs are finding themselves with very limited economic access to food (2018 Sudan Humanitarian Needs Overview).
- A total of 40,000 people in Kalama IDP camp, South Darfur state, will receive food rations for six months through a World Vision food for work project.
- World Vision started health sector activities in El Firdous refugee camp reaching about 8,000 registered South Sudanese refugees and the host community, and protection activities in El Neem C IDP camp, which hosts 6,884 IDPs out of which 2,753 are children.
- In Blue Nile State, World Vision secured the necessary approvals to implement a one-year multi-sectoral integrated project targeting a total of 166,056 IDPs, returnees and the host communities. The project funded by Sudan Humanitarian Fund (SHF) covers WASH, education, and food security and livelihoods sectors.

- Also in Blue Nile, World Vision was part of a team that conducted a rapid joint assessment. Currently the team is still carrying out the analysis of the findings.
