

Key messages

- Children are becoming more vulnerable: Due to conflict and violence, children have been exposed to various forms of violence and abuse, they have been forced out of their homelands and as a result are living as refugees. Currently there are 149,207 refugees from DRC and Burundi, (92,541 are children).
- Repatriation of refugees: 3,788 Burundian refugees were repatriated in August, while 86,788 registered the intention to return. 27,368 others are pending departure. Cumulatively, 44,075 refugees have been repatriated to Burundi since September 2017.
- New policy: A new policy implemented by the Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA) prohibits businesses in the camps including motorbikes and bicycles operations. Some refugees engage in such businesses as a means of earning income, as such they see this policy as a threat to their livelihoods.
- World Vision response: 141,674 refugees in Nyarugusu camps (over 95% of the targeted) received food assistance in the form of General Food Distribution while another 45,076 refugees in Mtendeli and Nduta camps received food assistance under the Supplementary Feeding Programme (SFP).
